Walking with the Past:

A Sikh Pioneer Journey

Join us for a powerful journey honoring Sikh pioneers. We'll begin with a Symbolic Lumber Walk from Mill Lake to the Gur Sikh Temple, followed by a visit to the museum and outdoor displays.

Then we travel to Simcoe Park for Chaupai Sahib and a reflection on Bhai Mewa Singh's Shaheedi.

In Vancouver, we'll visit the Ross Street Gurdwara, Komagata Maru Museum, and Memorial at Canada Place, followed by lunch and a stroll on the boardwalk.

We'll end with stops at Portal Park, Vancouver Art Gallery, Kitsilano, and Crab Park, before returning to Kalgidhar Darbar.

The Shame of 1914:

Guru Nanak Jahaz Anchored in Injustice

On May 22, 1914, the steamship Komagata Maru, known to its passengers as the Guru Nanak Jahaz, anchored in Vancouver harbour carrying 376 East Indian immigrants, mostly Sikh passengers from Punjab. What followed was a defining moment in Canadian history. Speaking in Parliament, politician H.H. Stevens declared that Canada must remain a "white British Columbia," emphasizing that Asian immigration threatened the nation's identity. His racially charged statement was met with thunderous applause, marking a dark chapter in Canada's immigration history and the struggle for justice, dignity, and equality for early Sikh settlers.

What to Bring:

Dress for the weather, bring a light jacket, sweater, or an umbrella if needed! We'll be traveling together on a rented bus, so come prepared. Don't forget your backpack to carry snacks and personal items as we explore history on the move!
